Preface

In 1991 REED published the Lancashire volume edited by David George, with an appendix for Isle of Man dramatic records, edited by Roger Dickinson. Subsequently, Elizabeth Baldwin undertook a comprehensive and systematic survey of ecclesiastical court documents for the diocese of Chester as part of her research for a more recent REED publication, Cheshire including Chester, co-edited with Lawrence M. Clopper and David Mills (2007). Her survey yielded some new records of popular entertainments in Lancashire parishes that fell within the higher jurisdiction of the bishop of Chester and the archbishop of York. Further records for Lancashire and the Isle of Man discovered in recent years by David George and David Mills have encouraged us to make these addenda available to a wider audience.

The web allows us to upload substantial addenda (in PDF format) for published REED collections, which can be easily downloaded for reference in conjunction with the relevant editions. We are pleased to publish the first of several addenda collections: the Lancashire addenda, co-edited by Elizabeth Baldwin, David George, and David Mills.

On behalf of the three editors I would like to acknowledge the duke of Sutherland and the following repositories for their permission to publish records from their collections: the Bodleian Library; Borthwick Institute of Archives, University of York; The British Library; Cheshire and Chester Archives and Local Studies; Hatfield House Library; The Manx National Heritage Library; and The National Archives of the United Kingdom.

We would also like to warmly thank several members of the REED staff and other associates for their expert assistance in bringing the records to publication: Jessica Freeman, Patrick Gregory (also Latin translator), Kirstie Jackson, Jonathan Peplar (CCALS archivist), and Sylvia Thomas for on-site paleographical checking; Andrew Taylor for his help with the Stanley poem; Arleane Ralph and Carolyn Black for editorial management; and Gordon Oxley for typesetting.

Households

BOLD OF BOLD

The seat of the Bold family was at Bold, on the River Mersey about sixteen miles east of Liverpool. Francis Bold's inventory is in a bishops' register containing a variety of details and documents relevant to the diocese including wills and inventories.

Inventory of Francis Bold, Gentleman

Chester, Cheshire and Chester Archives and Local Studies, EDA 2/2; 1579–1637; Latin and English; paper; xvii + 349; 374mm x 266mm; contemporary ink foliation to f 260, then pagination to p 307, and foliation ff 308–80; some enlarged headings; some fraying of edges of early leaves; brown leather and board binding (spine broken, front cover broken off, very worn), title in white on spine: 'EDA 2/2.'

DOWNES OF WARDLEY

Wardley Hall, still standing, is six miles west of Manchester. Roger Downes appears to have bought Wardley Hall after Francis Sherrington, the previous owner, died without issue in 1600 (George (ed), Lancashire, p lxxxvii). Downes (d. 1638) was MP for Wigan in 1601 and 1621, and vice-chamberlain of Cheshire in 1625. He 'appears to have been reconciled to the Roman church' in his later years. He bequeathed the Wardley estate to Francis Downes, his eldest son by his second wife. Roger Downes married a third time in 1620 (vch: Lancashire, vol 4, p 385). Wardley Hall is described at length by Farrer and Brownbill (pp 385–8); for information on Wardley Hall as a performance venue, see the REED Patrons and Performances Web Site (<<http://link.library.utoronto.ca/reed/>>).

Household Accounts of Roger Downes

Mertoun, the Duke of Sutherland's Library; 1605–37; English; paper; 171 leaves; 254mm x 166mm; unnumbered; paper cover, covered with scribbling and 7 lines of Latin verse, signed at intervals by Roger Downes. Available in photocopy at Huntington Library, EL 11826.

HESKETH OF PRESTON

Inventory of Sir Thomas Hesketh

Sir Thomas Hesketh (1548–1605) of Whitehill and Preston, Lancashire, and Heslington, Yorkshire East Riding, was the second son of Gabriel Hesketh of Aughton. He sat as MP for Preston (1586, 1589), Lancaster (1597, 1604), and Lancashire (1601), was knighted in 1603, and served as attorney for the court of Wards from 1597 onward (see History of Parliament: The House of Commons 1558–1603, P.W. Hasler (ed), vol 2 (London, 1981), 305–6).

The inventory is one of several documents within a bundle comprehended by the same catalogue number. The inventory lists goods from three separate locations, each listing made at a different date – at Heslington, Yorkshire East Riding (mbs [1–4], 24 December 1605); Preston, Lancashire (mbs [4–5], 6 November 1605); and Stanworth, Lancashire (mb [5], 5 November 1605).

Chester, Cheshire and Chester Archives and Local Studies, DCR 38/8; 1605; English; parchment; 5 mbs; 840mm x 210mm; unnumbered; membranes attached top to bottom, mb [3] has become detached from mbs [2] and [4].

SHIREBURN OF STONYHURST

Sir Richard Shireburn, son of the Sir Richard Shireburn whose Stonyhurst household records appear in George (ed), Lancashire, pp 162–5, died in 1628. The players of his son, Richard Shireburn (1591–1667), appeared at Dunkenhalgh on 3 January 1628/9 (George (ed), Lancashire, p 197). For information on Stonyhurst as a performance venue, see the REED Patrons and Performances Web Site (<<http://link.library.utoronto.ca/reed/>>).

Will of Sir Richard Shireburn

York, Borthwick Institute, Probate Register 40B; 4 September 1627, proved 10 March 1628/9; Latin and English; parchment; ii + 322 + ii; 360–95mm x 267–310mm; possibly contemporary ink foliation ff 320–641; good condition; modern brown and tan leather-and-cloth binding, title in gold lettering on spine: ‘Wills 1628–1629 320–641 40 B.’

STANLEY OF KNOWSLEY, LATHOM, AND NEW PARK

The Praise of Edward Stanley's Musicianship

Edward Stanley (c 1460–1523), 1st Baron Monteagle, was a younger son of Thomas, 10th earl of Derby (c 1433–1504), who married Lady Margaret Beaufort in 1472. Lady Margaret was the widowed mother of the future Henry VII, who defeated Richard III in 1485 at Bosworth Field with Sir Thomas Stanley's help, for which Stanley was rewarded with the earldom of Derby. Edward Stanley thus moved in royal circles and it is not surprising that he played the clavichords at Newbattle Abbey before James IV of Scotland in 1503. In that year James married Margaret Tudor, the eldest daughter of Henry VII.

Bodl.: ms. Rawl. poet. 143 is a composite of two independent mss: (1) ff vi–11, 'Of the several Beastes of Venary,' by Julyana Barnes; (2) after f 11c, there is a modern blue paper cover with '190' in the top left corner in ink and, on ff 12–26, 'The Stanleys antiquytyes in englyshe meeter,' followed by drafts of love lyrics, ff 27–7v. The poem was published in James Orchard Halliwell (ed), Palatine Anthology; A Collection of Ancient Poems and Ballads Relating to Lancashire and Cheshire (London, 1850), 252–4.

Oxford, Bodleian Library, ms. Rawl. poet. 143; 16th and 17th c.; English; paper; vi + 37; 300mm x 195mm; modern pencil foliation; folios pre-ruled, with an irregular number of lines per folio; good condition; parchment on board binding.

Burghley's Notes on the State of Lancashire and Cheshire

This document is written in the hand of William Cecil, 1st Baron Burghley (1520–98).

Hatfield, Hatfield House Archives, Cecil Papers 159/15–17; 1571; English; paper; 2 sheets; 325mm x 218mm; pencil and red ink foliation (red ink followed here); booklet sewn with string; endorsed: 'Lancashyre Countie,' 'Sir Thomas Stanley Sir Edward Stanley Sir Thomas Gerrard,' and, in a different and probably much later hand, 'Memorandums 1571.'

Harry Parker's Farewell to Life

In August 1576 Thomas Chaloner, Chester herald and member of the city's Painters' Company, wrote a twenty-seven stanza poem purporting to be a farewell to pleasures and to life by Henry Parker, an elderly servant of the Derby family at their seat at Lathom Hall in Lancashire. Chaloner had written an earlier poem in praise of Parker, stressing his Lancastrian origins and his interest in astrology and astronomy. There is no reason to doubt the accuracy of his account. (See The Chetham Society, Remains Historical & Literary Connected with the Palatine Counties of Lancaster and Chester, vol 31, The Derby Household Books ... by William Ffarington, Esquire, the Comptroller, F.R. Raines (ed) (Manchester, 1853), 114–15.)

London, British Library, Harley ms 1927; 16th and 17th c.; English and Latin; paper; 126 + i; 205mm x 135mm; modern pencil foliation; modern green leather binding; title on spine in gilt lettering. The first three folios and ff 121–3 were part of a late 17th-c. legal document.

Letter of Bishop Richard Vaughan to Thomas Hesketh TNA: PRO SP 12/266
 f [1]* (29 January)

My very hertie Comendacions remembred. Sir. forasmuch as I vnderstand that the cheifeste of those Recusantes, which were to be apprehended for their contemptes and non paymentes are started hence to london to make freendes to procure their release, and so thinke to free themselves for their apparance before me, and answeringe theire Recusancy. These are to advertise you thereof, and to pray you to be a meane to Master Secretary that some of them for example sake may receyue some punishmente, and that all they, which appeare may be bound over to answeere their Recusancy before me. A matter as I Iudge very requisite, that the cheiffe [be] beinge restreyned, the reste of meaner condicion may by the terror thereof be sooner reformede. I do heare also that the prison at Lancaster is very ill kepte, that the Recusantes there haue liberty to go when, and whither they liste, to hunt, hauke, and go to horse rases, at their pleasure, which notorious abuse of lawe, and Iustice, wold speedelie be reformed, and by no man soner, than by master Secretarye. If there be no meanes vsed to kepe them in, and to bringe in others ye cheiffe in this faction yt will breed in the end not a myscheife, onelie; but a publique inconvenience.
 Sence my former lettre vnto you none hath bene sent in by master Sheriffe but one William Thwyng a gentleman, who hath submitted himself before me, and is bound over to make payment of such money as he is rated at.
 I doubt not but you do remember master Secretary to contynewe his good meanyng for certen preachers to be placed in lancashire yt is highe tyme to provyde them, and also some remedies againste these evills that growe so faste, to the hazard of Religion, and of the state, the care whereof I beseeche you to recommend to master Secretary and others, as occasion may serve.
 And so wishinge to you as to my self, I commende you to the blessed protection of the Almightye
 Chester this xxixth of Ianuarye, 1598 your very assured lovyng freend

His second sonne Edwarde married to an heyre a thowsand markes a yeare of good landes and fayre his plainge [of] of Instrumentes was a good noyse his singing as excellent with a sweete voyce 40

his countenance comely with visage demure
 Not moving nor streining but stedfast and sure
 He would shewe in a single Recorder pipe as many partes as any in a bagge-pipe
 When the king of Castyle was dryuen hyther 5 by force and violence of stormye wether
 He broughte with him were thoughte fine musitions there was none better in theyre opi[o]nions Kinge of Castile said theyre [w] actes more to able | they were gentlemen of houses notable 10
 I have quoth Henry seaventhe a knyghte my servante one of the greatest Earles sonnes in all my land
 His singinge gallante with a voyce most sweetelye his plainge pleasante much better then meetelye he playes of all Instrumentes non comes amisse 15 Call sir Edward standley lo Sir heere he is Come neere good sir Edward standelaye quod the king for the honowre of vs shewe parte of your conninge
 He stooode before the kinges doubtles this was true
 In a fayre gowne of cloth of gould of tissiue 20
 Like no common minstrell to shewe taverne myrth but like a noble mann both of Land and byrth he shewed much conning those two kings before that the others had no Luste to playe any more He played of all Instrumentes notable well 25 but of all thinges mused king of Castell to heare two partes in a single Recorder that was beyond all their Estimations far And then king harry made [^]him¹ to blowe his horne they had never hard such one since they were borne 30
 In no Realme any for true and fyne blowinge since Tristram the prince of huntessen was liuinge
 In two hornes at once would a wonderouse noyse make
 In the one Rechate and in the other strake Blowinge diuers measures was very diffuse 35 before kings and others he did it of vse he had more quallities like a gentleman then in all his time had any other mann and for his hardines to saye truth and Ryghte

He was stoute mann and a valiante knight

Isle of Man Records

Indenture between William Park and John Darsse

This record has also been transcribed by J.R. Oliver in Monumenta de Insula Manniae, vol 9, The Manx Society (Douglas, 1862), 25–6.

London, British Library, Harley ms 2095; 11 December 1502; English; paper; single sheet; 305mm x 352mm; numerous deletions and interlineations, paper creased and stained, some tears resulting in loss of text. Now folded and bound in guardbook and numbered pp 159–60.

Stanley of Castle Rushen Weekly Accounts

The first set of Castle Rushen accounts was kept for the thirteenth earl of Derby, Henry Stanley (1531–93); the second, for the fifteenth earl of Derby, William Stanley (1561–1642). For more on entertainments at the castle, see David George (ed), Lancashire, REED (Toronto, 1991), 267–81. ms 09782 is also transcribed in Journal of the Manx Museum, 2 (September 1931), 25–7, in the series ‘Unpublished Documents of the Manx Museum.’

Douglas, Isle of Man, Manx National Heritage Library, ms 09782 (Castle Rushen Papers – CA1); 28 October 1579–September 1580; Latin and English; paper; 28 leaves; 312mm x 205mm; unnumbered.

Douglas, Isle of Man, Manx National Heritage Library, ms 09782 (Castle Rushen Papers – CA1); 1634; Latin and English; paper; single sheet; 305mm x 205mm.

Bishop Foster’s Visitation

William Foster was consecrated bishop of the diocese of Sodor and Man in March 1633/4, and held the title until his death in February 1634/5. Foster’s visitations are also transcribed in the Journal of the Manx Museum in the series ‘Unpublished Documents of the Manx Museum’ in the following issues: 2 (September 1931), 28–9 for Arbory; 2 (December 1931), 33–5 for Santan; 2 (March 1932), 41–2 for Onchan; 2 (June 1932), 54–7 for Malew and Braddan; and 2 (September 1932), 67–9 for Lezayre and Marown.

Douglas, Isle of Man, Manx National Heritage Library, MS 09756 (Papers of the Diocese of Sodor and Man); 1634; English; paper; 21 leaves; 302mm x 197mm; modern pencil pagination on modern leaves (only those pages that have attached folios bear a number, in each case the 2 pages between mounted pages are left blank, after p 7 the parish name is also entered in pencil or ink at the top right, following p 15 there are 6 leaves identified by the letters A to E to which are attached modern transcripts – A, B, D, and E have 1 leaf each, C has 2); unmounted items in poor condition.

Endnotes

13 CCALS: EDC 5/1617/63 Bolton f [5]

Bolton Grammar School was founded in 1524 when ‘William Haigh of Wigan left land worth 33s 4d towards the maintenance of a school master to teach grammar in Bolton’ (J.J. Bagley, A History of Lancashire, 6th ed (London, 1976), 50). It evidently had a library with chained books (J. Howard Brown, Elizabethan Schooldays: An Account of the English Grammar Schools in the second half of the Sixteenth Century (Oxford, 1933), 22). The ‘schoole stocke’ means the endowment, which Croston and the others allegedly embezzled. Evidently they closed the school and had the boys taught in a private house. The school must have reopened, however, because it ‘was united about 1656 with the foundation of Robert Lever in 1641, the present grammar school being the representative of both’ (VCH: Lancashire, vol 5, p 251).

13–14 CCALS: EDC 5/1603/60 Burnley f [1]

The parish church at Burnley was St Peter’s. Rushes were generally used for church and chamber floors, but this record mentions that they were also used for covering seats. The violent reaction by Walmesley, Tailor, and Lingard at this rushbearing was paralleled by one at Garstang in 1608, when three men rushed violently into the church (George (ed), Lancashire, p 22). There was a similar incident at Chipping in 1621. At Goosnargh in 1633 the rush-bearing was accompanied by a drummer, fiddlers, and dancing; and at Hornby the same year, with morris dancing, a lord of misrule, clowns, ugly shapes, crosses, and crucifixes (see the present records for these three cases).

Perhaps all four cases can be connected with what David Cressy has called ‘The War on Pomp’: ‘The reformation of religion ... went hand in hand with the reformation of manners. Along with their attacks on the errors of papism, English Protestant reformers urged propriety and decency in social and religious rituals’ (Birth, Marriage, and Death (Oxford, 1997), 412). Nicholas Assheton remarked that at Whalley in 1617, ‘ther a rushbearing, but much less solemnitie than formerlie’ (George (ed), Lancashire, p 145).

The Burnley record was first printed by Elizabeth Baldwin, ‘Rushbearings and Maygames in the Diocese of Chester before 1642,’ English Parish Drama, Alexandra F. Johnston and Wim Hüsken (eds) (Amsterdam, 1996), 33–4.

Chipping is a village about six miles north-east of Preston and about ten miles west of Clitheroe. The patron saint of its church is St Bartholomew. Elmridge is one and a half miles south-west of Chipping, and Thornley about three-quarters of a mile south-east (VCH: Lancashire, vol 7, p 21 (map)).

His ‘Lordship’ was the bishop of Chester, John Bridgeman. For possible causes of the disturbance, see above, endnote to CCALS: EDC 5/1603/60 Burnley f [1].

The parish church of Colne was St Bartholomew. Marsden, where Alexander Turner lived, was the old name of Nelson, which changed its name when the Lord Nelson public house dominated the town centre in the nineteenth century. Marsden was three miles south of Colne.

The parish church for Goosnargh was St Mary the Virgin. Fieldfoot ('fildfoote') is now Field Foot Farm, three-quarters of a mile east of Goosnargh.

This record establishes in detail that the music and dancing that often accompanied the carrying of rushes to the church continued into the church itself. There had been trouble with carrying rushes to the church on a Sunday at Goosnargh in 1590, and with piping in the church, sanctioned by the curate, in 1611. That the women were carrying the rushes is not surprising in view of James's Book of Sports (1617): 'the women to have leave to Carrie rushes to ye Church for the decoringe of it accordinge to theire ould Custome.' However, James specified that rush-bearing must take place 'after the e[nd] of all devyne service' (George (ed), Lancashire, pp 23–4, 230).

16–17 BI: V.1633/CB.2A ff 269v–70

Great Harwood ('Much Harwood') is about seven miles west of Burnley. The church was originally St Lawrence, but early in the sixteenth century was changed to St Bartholomew. In 1633 the minister was probably William Kippax (vch: Lancashire, vol 6, p 343).

The occurrence of Sunday piping, fiddling, and a maypole with a red cross on top seems to indicate a popular sense that the 1633 Book of Sports permitted a relaxation of Sunday observance. 'Maypoles flourished in this period, having been particularly endorsed by King Charles' reissue of the Book of Sports in 1633' (George (ed), Lancashire, p 321). Indeed, Archbishop Neile's visitation articles of 1633 did not include Sunday piping, fiddling, or maypoles; however, abuse of the minister would certainly bring the diocesan court's attention to the disorders at Great Harwood's parish church. (See George (ed), Lancashire, p 216.)

Maypoles were the special object of Puritan animosity, as at Melling in 1611 and Prescott in 1624; the latter record concerns the illegal cutting down of maypoles. The Great Harwood maypole was to be accompanied by dancing around it; a similar activity went successfully unchallenged at Little Crosby in 1641, which had a maypole, dancers, and a piper, but that was on a Tuesday (George (ed), Lancashire, pp 32–4, 69, 85).

Heapey is near Leyland, about seven miles south of Preston, and Withnell and Whittle le Woods are hamlets respectively north-east and north-west of Heapey. Waterhouse is now presumably Waterhouse Green, just over two miles west-north-west of Heapey, and less than a mile south-west of Whittle le Woods. The defendants were required to confess their fault in Leyland parish church. The date for their first appearance was given as 13 April 'Anno domini 1620,' which, given the day and date of the offence ('the 4th of marche Sabothe daie') and the dates of the subsequent appearances, is undoubtedly a mistake for '1621' (the clerk evidently having failed to register the change of year at 25 March).

Hornby is three and a half miles east of Carnforth, near Lancaster. Garstang (l.39) is about ten miles south of Lancaster.

This offence seems to have been recusant in nature, given the 'Crucifixes vpon their Rushes.' This is certainly the most elaborate rush-bearing of any recorded so far and seems purposely intended to break the sabbath. No doubt Charles I's 1633 reissue of James I's Book of Sports (1617) created the impression that strict sabbatarianism was over and perhaps led to this splendid triumph with pikes, guns, and muskets. However, Archbishop Neile's visitation articles for Lancashire (1633) specifically forbade 'Lords of misrule,' 'moris-dancers,' or 'other prophane vsage in your Church or Church-yard.' Thus the Hornby rush-bearers must have contravened this article by entering the churchyard and perhaps even the church with their riotous procession. They also carried rushes on a Sunday in contravention of Archbishop Harsnett's visitation articles for Lancashire (1628–9). (See George (ed), Lancashire, pp 215–16.)

'Piclers like Giantes' (l.23) almost certainly means 'clowns on stilts.' 'Piclers' were pickle-herrings (clowns, buffoons), though this is a very early use of the word (see 'pickle-herring,' OED Online).

This record was first printed by Elizabeth Baldwin in 'Rushbearings and Maygames in the Diocese of Chester before 1642,' English Parish Drama, Alexandra F. Johnston and Wim Hüskén (eds) (Amsterdam, 1996), 35, who notes that 'the main participants were dismissed, in the following year, with a warning.' She also thought that the large crowd and the weapons 'may have been more defensive than celebratory.'

For Thomas Hesketh, see p 10. Bishop Richard Vaughan's letter concerns non-payment of fines by recusants and 'the cheifeste of those Recusantes' who were on their way to London. At this date (1598/9) the leading Lancashire recusants were mostly those whose houses are found marked on Lord Burghley's map of the county in 1590. 'Master Secretary' was Sir Robert Cecil, and the high sheriff of Lancashire ('master Sheriffe') was Richard Hoghton. (See George (ed), Lancashire, pp xxiv, xxxiv, cxxii–cxxiii).

William Thwyng's payments were doubtless recusancy fines, which were 'rated' according to income. The rating system had been set up by the privy council in 1577, when a national census of recusants was made with 'precise details of how much every recusant was worth' (Alice Hogge, God's Secret Agents (New York, 2005), 107).

Vaughan asks Hesketh to remind Cecil that Lancashire needed 'certain preachers,' who were provided in 1599 and were known as the queen's preachers (George (ed), Lancashire, p 319).

This case, between James Bolton and Thomas Legh over an illegitimate child or children, involves what seems to have been an unlawful marriage of first cousins, if William Perscall, father of Adam, and Richard Perscall, father of Jane, were brothers. The deponent Roger Miltowe is described as a parishioner of Middleton, having come from Bury seventy-two years earlier. He is said to have known James Bolton for sixteen years and Thomas Legh for twenty. Miltowe recalled a marriage between Adam and Jane in Manchester parish church seventy years previously. He must have been younger than the couple since he would have been about fourteen in 1488. When the couple were in their teens, that is about 1488, they attended 'plais markettes and ale howsis.' This is the first record of plays in Manchester in the fifteenth century.

'Blakeleye' is Blackley and 'curuissall' is Kersal, small townships about five miles north-east and north-west of Manchester.

The persons in this case lived in Millgate, Manchester, now a central street named Long Millgate. It was evidently close to the Cockpit (George (ed), Lancashire, p 63). The date of the events, according to Rile, was from 'somewhat before Shrouetyde,' 21–3 February in that year; or according to Parcevall, 'about Candlemas,' 2 February. The annoyance evidently continued until William Stanley brought his suit in April.

The case against Ralph Marler for Sunday ales is printed in George (ed), Lancashire, p 62 (church court) and p 113 (quarter sessions). The entry on f 114v is duplicated here to give context to the following entry on f 115.

24–5 CCALS: EDC 5/1608/103 ff [1–1v]

Ralph Marler continued to be a law-breaker despite having been fined for a Sunday ale and for keeping an unlicensed alehouse in 1601. The bearbaiting he held at his house was likely a magnet for the selling of ale, as at Newton in Makerfield in 1598, when William Ridyat profaned the sabbath 'with pypinge & Bearbaytinge by reason of an Ale hee then had' (George (ed), Lancashire, p 72).

North Meols is about three miles north of modern Southport. Hesketh had apparently been charged before with piping at unseasonable times. The last entry on the preceding page of the manuscript, f 194v, concerns piping and fiddling on the sabbath day by Anthony Cruste and William Atkinson, and is found in George (ed), Lancashire, p 72.

25 CCALS: EDV 1/24 f 180v

Residents of Farington, near Leyland, had refused to carry rushes to church, presumably St Mary's parish church at Penwortham, in 1608 (George (ed), Lancashire, p 75). Robert Aughton refused in this case, probably on the grounds that rush-bearing was popish. The area was on the border between west Lancashire's Catholic population and east Lancashire's Protestants with their puritanical allegiance.

26 CCALS: EDC 5/1614/7 Ribchester single sheet

Henry Norcross was instituted as vicar of St Wilfrid, Ribchester, in March 1573/4. He seems to have been a totally unfit vicar, contravening Archbishop Matthew's visitation articles of 1607 against Sunday ales and other hindrances of 'Prayers, Sermons, or other godly exercises' (George (ed), Lancashire, p 215). Norcross continued to reside in Ribchester even after he was deprived and he was buried there on 14 August 1623 (vch: Lancashire, vol 7, p 42). The partly illegible word '(...)oringe' is probably 'whoring.'

27 CCALS: EDV 1/22 inside back cover

There is no context on the cover for the entry. 'Sausburie' seems to reflect the local pronunciation of Samlesbury, about four miles east of Preston. John Heyhurst piped in the town, presumably on a Sunday; he and others were charged, also in 1619, 'for haueinge pypeinge musicke and dauncinge in there houses att divine service time vpon the Saboth daie' (George (ed), Lancashire, p 91).

27–8 CCALS: EDC 5/1639/32 Whalley ff [2v], [3]

Itinerant jugglers seem to have had a bad reputation, as at Liverpool in 1571–2, where they are linked with 'wandrang people,' and at Garstang in 1601, where they are classed with other unlawful and disorderly persons. However, a juggler was paid 12d for performing at Dunkenhalgh in September 1626 (George (ed), Lancashire, pp 21, 39, 196). The juggler in the Whalley case was of the disreputable kind, it appears.

There are two Wyresdales, Over Wyresdale and Nether Wyresdale, both within ten miles of Lancaster and both on the River Wyre. The church for Over Wyresdale is Christ Church, founded before 1570, with a graveyard attached. Nether Wyresdale is 4.6 miles south-west of Over Wyresdale. The two churches for Nether Wyresdale, St Peter's and St Mary and St James', are less than a mile away in Scorton. John Jackson, the accused in this case, came from Ellel, four miles from Nether Wyresdale and six miles from Over Wyresdale. He may have committed his offence in either Wyresdale, though Nether Wyresdale was closer to his home. Dalton is about five miles east of Burton in Kendal, Westmorland, and about three miles from Ellel.

Downes died in 1638 and mentioned in his will 'his sons Francis and John, and his daughter Jane' (vch: Lancashire, vol 4, pp 384–5). Jane was provided with lute strings in 1624 and lessons on the virginals in 1628.

'Grundies' was probably the home of Thomas Grundy, who appears in the account book among those paid for services in 1632–5 (pp [286], [290], [292], [294–5]) and 1637 (p [302]).

31 BI: Probate Register 40B f 359

'Lawnd' was probably New Laund, a house close to Stonyhurst, which was in the manor of Aighton, Bailey, and Chaigley near Whalley. Some time after 1355 'Robert de Shireburn appears to have acquired as owner or tenant the shares of his sisters-in-law, so becoming lord of the whole manor' of Aighton. Though there are 'traces' of other lordships of the manor or part of it after that, in 1576 Sir Richard Shireburn owned it and 'compounded with' Lord Monteagle, presumably to buy out his rental interest. (See vch: Lancashire, vol 7, pp 2–3, 21 (map), 419.) Most likely Sir Richard built Laund on this land, and it came to be called New Laund because there was another Laund ('Old Laund') about four miles north of Burnley, owned by the Robinson family and built c 1570 (vch: Lancashire, vol 6, p 521; Kathy Fishwick, private correspondence, August 2008).

31–3 Bodl.: ms. Rawl. poet. 143 ff 22–2v

The 'Kinge of Castile' (p 32, l.9) was Philip I (1478–1506), who in January 1505/6, while sailing to Castile from the Low Countries with his wife Joanna, was driven by a storm onto the Dorset coast. Henry VII at once invited the couple to Windsor, where he showed them every attention and made Philip a knight of the Garter. The poet alludes to the interrupted voyage: 'When the king of Castyle was dryuen hyther/ by force and violence of stormye wether' (p 32, ll.5–6). Stanley's performance must have taken place at Henry's palace at Windsor.

'His' (p 31, l.39) refers to Edward Stanley's father, Thomas Stanley, 10th earl of Derby. Edward was married twice, first to Anne Harington, daughter of Sir John Harington of Hornby, and second to Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Thomas Vaughan and widow of John, Baron Grey of Wilton, before 25 November 1501. The 'heyre' could have been either wife.

The poem appears to be at the draft stage, as shown by the corrections and cruxes. Its style and spelling date it early in Elizabeth's reign, and it has been attributed to Thomas Stanley (d. 1569), bishop of Sodor and Man (James Orchard Halliwell (ed), Palatine Anthology; A Collection of Ancient Poems and Ballads Relating to Lancashire and Cheshire (London, 1850), 208). Thomas was the son of Edward Stanley, and hence in a position to know his father's history. An alternative attribution is that by Andrew Taylor, 'The Stanley Poem and the Harper Richard Sheale,' Leeds Studies in English, ns, 28 (1997), 99–102, based on a comparison of the style of the Stanley poem and the known works of Thomas Stanley and Sheale.

33 Hatfield House Archives: Cecil Papers 159/15–17 ff 1, 3

The phrase ‘servat to ye Erle of late rayled’ may mean that Kent had been a servant of Edward, the 12th earl of Derby, until recently, or that he had ‘of late rayled ageynst ye shyryves’ shortly after ‘all sowle daye’ (2 November). The location was probably Chester, the only ‘Cite’ in Lancashire and Cheshire during the period. All Souls’ was a traditional holy day excised from the protestant church calendar. Kent’s threat to bring back church-bell ringing in 1572 might mean that he was a recusant or that All Souls’ Day provided work for minstrels.

The ‘Lord strang’ of this record was Henry Stanley (1531–93), who succeeded his father Edward and became 13th earl of Derby, 5th Baron Stanley, and lord of the Isle of Man on 24 October 1572. Henry had four sons with Margaret Clifford, as well as at least three more children with Jane Halsall of Knowsley, Lancashire, his common-law wife.

The sons who were taught to dance were ‘of bold syde yat went from y Erl of Derby.’ ‘Syde’ may mean ‘kinship’ or ‘descent.’ The Bolds of Bold, Lancashire, had estates in south-central Lancashire, almost on the River Mersey. The Stanleys were their near neighbours to the north-west. The owner of the Bold estate in 1571–2 was Richard (c 1538–1603), who succeeded at his father’s death in 1558. His father had five daughters, and any one of these could have been the mother of the sons being taught to dance in 1571–2 at Knowsley (vch: Lancashire, vol 3, p 406).

33–4 BL: Harley MS 1927 ff 20v, 22, 22v

Parker is the ostensible writer of this poem, and he is imagined as writing it on white paper, ‘in paper pale.’ ‘tell’ is evidently used for ‘bid,’ whose object is ‘ffarewell.’ ‘ffarewell therfore braue brute that bears the boasting bell’ is probably a reference to a race horse since the phrase ‘mr Davenport his horse gote ye said bell’ occurs in Liverpool records for 1576–7 and Nicholas Assheton notes that ‘Sherburne’s mare run, and lost the bell’ in 1618 (George (ed), Lancashire, pp 44, 147).
